Bulletin # 2

From Swiss Racquetball

Dear European Racquetball Friends,

We are pleased to welcome the European Racquetball Championships 2025 to Switzerland this August.

It is an honor to host teams from across Europe in our club in Aesch, and we look forward to a great time together on and off the court.

As a small racquetball community, we may have some limitations compared to larger nations. However, we are committed to offering a warm welcome and a memorable event.

We hope you enjoy the matches, our club, and a bit of our beautiful country.

Yours in sport,

Monica Ona President Swiss Racquetball Association

About the Swiss...

The Swiss take punctuality very seriously. In Swiss culture, a punctual person is considerate, and by being punctual, they show respect for other people. Swiss trains are also the epitome of punctuality, they are always on time.

You should respect the Swiss' manners wherever you go, even at the grocery store you visit weekly. Say Salü, Hoi, Grüetzi, or Ciao to people in your area. The Swiss consider this to be polite.

Since Switzerland is a federation of different regions, it is quite common for Swiss to speak in more than one language. You will find it so interesting to travel through Switzerland and interact with people from other regions.

Among the four languages spoken in Switzerland are German, Italian, French, and Rumantsch. People from Zermatt may speak Italian and French, while those from Gstaad may speak French or German.

Despite their respect for community rules and orderliness, Swiss people are also known for offering individual freedom, taking cleanliness very seriously, and paying great attention to their neighbors.

Generally, Swiss people keep to themselves, especially in big cities. On the other hand, people from the countryside can be friendly and welcoming.

Swiss people are perfectionists. This characteristic can be seen in their products as well. Swiss products include good food, shoes, clothing, success at work, and achieving greater heights through smart work.
